Free mental health assessment available

Have you been feeling consistently moody or sad? Can't relax or concentrate? Been alternating between highs and lows? Have you been troubled by unexplained aches and pains? Are you unable to eat or sleep? If so, you may be suffering from a mental health disorder.

The military is offering free online mental health and alcohol self-assessments for a range of common emotional situations that often go undiagnosed and misunderstood. If you've been feeling disconnected and unlike your usual self lately, this program can help you put the pieces back together. The self-assessment program offers self-tests for depression, bipolar disorder, generalized anxiety disorder, and post-traumatic stress disorder. It is available at www.MilitaryMentalHealth.org and 1-877-877-3647.

Questions included on the online assessment are:

- Have you lost pleasure in things you used to enjoy?
- Do you have trouble sleeping or eating?
- Does your mood fluctuate between overly "high" to sad and hopeless?
- Are you keyed up and anxious all the time?
- Are you having nightmares about something that happened in the past?
- Do you suffer from unexplained aches and pains?

Once the self-assessment is completed, you will be given information on where to turn for a full evaluation.

The Mental Health Self-Assessment Program is a voluntary, anonymous mental health and alcohol self-assessment and referral program offered to military families and service members affected by deployment. It is offered online and via the telephone 24/7, as well as through local in-person events. This program is offered without charge through the DoD, Force Health Protection and Readiness, Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Health Affairs.

AAFES NEWS RELEASES

Military moving center brings savings home

DALLAS – The Army & Air Force Exchange Service (AAFES) is on the move, offering military families a quick and easy way to save time and money on the numerous challenges associated with moving to a new assignment. Searchable by specific street address, AAFES' Military Moving Center service is a "one stop" shop where troops moving to or within the continental United States can connect and compare local utilities and services with just a few clicks of the mouse.

Saving on household services through the Military Moving Center is a snap thanks to a platform that provides instant access to "special offers" and makes it easy to compare prices through a comprehensive network of more than 500 local, third party providers. Each service category, including television, high-speed internet and even electricity, offers the ability to directly compare prices and services of up to three competing outlets. For example, a comparison of basic telephone service in Arlington, Virginia, yielded choices ranging in price from $19.99 to $44.49; some options even touted special incentives such as free installation or a gift card.

Many of the service options available at AAFES' Military Moving Center also include a "Best Price Guarantee" that ensures exchange shoppers receive the best price that each provider offers (online or otherwise). In fact, Army and Air Force families who use AAFES' free moving service may actually receive a better price for many products through this site than otherwise available because of the special discounts many providers extend exchange shoppers.

Because of the ability to quickly compare offers, the Military Moving Center is a helpful tool for service members that aren't even planning or in the process of moving. "Don't be fooled by this service's name," said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief Master Sgt. Bryan Eaton. "You don't have to be moving to log on and compare local services. Anyone, moving or not, should check out this free service to make sure they're not paying too much for everyday household expenses."

Authorized exchange customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable Department of Defense civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card, can directly access AAFES' free moving service through www.aafes.com by clicking on the "Military Moving Center" link.
